

Personal Commitment

In the silence and solitude of novitiate, I have cultivated intimacy with God and with myself. I benefited from His love given freely and I discovered more deeply the person of Jesus. I deepened my experience of Christian life and the essential aspects of apostolic religious life. I heard the voice of God in the clamors of youth, children, the sick and the marginalized through my pastoral work and the different courses that I took.

In the joy of serving, I commit myself to always search for Jesus, to live my life in the light of the Gospel. I wish to serve the most vulnerable, the sick and the youth who don't know where to turn.

I wish to live in community in relationship with my companions so as to be a real woman of communion and I wish to be evangelized and to evangelize so that my words and my witnessing of life can be light for the world and salt for the earth.

Adeline Nadembèga, CSC

My Personal Commitment

With great joy I express my personal commitment. The experience and process of formation that I have lived have led me to become a disciple of Jesus. This allows me to say "Yes", the Reign of God's Love is possible here and now, and it is up to me to continue journeying and do my part in the realization of God's Reign.

By professing my vows today, I commit myself to witness in community to union of hearts, to love, to respect, to dialogue, to forgiveness, to service and to be open without reservation. Also, I wish to live in solidarity with the impoverished. Like Christ, I am passionate about humanizing the world. According to a proverb in my country (Burkina Faso): "One hand alone cannot gather flour spread out on the floor." This is to say that a person cannot realize this alone. Therefore, I wish to unite myself with my religious family so as to share my joy, my service, to fight for justice, for human rights in our very distorted world.

Finally, I wish to continue being one with Jesus, with his word that liberates, his gaze, his dispositions, his way of loving that permits one to recognize the dignity of a person. I wish to be coherent in my daily life.

May the light of the Risen Christ accompany me always on this beautiful path that never ends.

Chantal M'Po, CSC

Personal Commitment

Throughout this process I have encountered both women and men who were good Samaritans. They were not from my family, nor from my race, but they welcomed me as a sister with friendship and love, while giving me a place in their hearts and in their lives.

Conscious of the reality of our world in chaos in which there is less space for the voiceless, for those who count less, for the poor, I commit myself to care for the sick who are poor, to develop the quality of presence and attentive listening, to take time with those who are suffering, to share in their lived reality. Someone said, “The most difficult aspect of poverty is not to have nothing, but rather to have no one with whom to share the little I have. No one wants to come into my home, no one wants to drink my water, no one wants my friendship. ”

Dear brothers and sisters, by this profession, I simply wish to offer my sisterly presence and my willingness to listen attentively to those people God places on my path. I am touched, also, by the reality of our suffering earth. I wish to commit myself to caring for it through some daily personal gesture and to work with organizations that work strenuously to improve the situation. I ask you to help me to honor this commitment through your prayers, by calling me forth, and by your loving presence and support.

Edwige Paré, CSC

Personal Commitment

I have experienced two years of novitiate, discovering the person of Jesus through daily living in community, through courses and sessions received. Jesus is a God so very close, compassionate with all people and who loves unconditionally. Today, by professing my vows, I wish to follow Him, placing myself at the service of those suffering, sharing their sorrows and their joys. I also commit myself to make known to my brothers and sisters, God's love freely given by my witnessing in community life and proclamation of the Good News of which Jesus is the center, by being attentive to the realities of the world: the cries and clamors of homeless children, abused or abandoned women. Thus I will attempt to contribute with other groups to the construction of God's kingdom free of all human trafficking.

Monique Boumboundi, CSC

Personal Commitment

From my lived personal experiences in community with my sisters, my neighbors and my family, I listened to and seen the clamor of many persons and of several peoples. And, as Jesus did, so profoundly human, and as Basile Moreau our founder did by allowing the realities of his time to touch him, I, Walinedie, by the profession of my vows today, commit myself through religious life to stand with the weakest of society. I wish to share, give and receive what is a pathway of freedom and truth so as to respect the human rights and dignity of all. I wish to be united with those who fight for the respect of the cosmos and of human life in general, in a climate of unity, without violence and without discrimination, so that peace, justice, equality and brotherhood flourish in each person's heart, which has a its own sacred and fragile story. I pledge to collaborate in building a better more beautiful world, more human, with less corruption; I want to facilitate the greater fulfillment of all.

Walinedie Georges, CSC